Couple rescues errant motorist

- Vehicle went off road and plunged down 20-metre embankment
- Former volunteer firefighter risked life to pull man to safety

JEREMY NOLAÏS
@METRONEWS.CA

Fuelled by pure adrenaline, a Calgary-area couple rescued a motorist from his burning vehicle with literally a minute to spare yesterday.

Natalie Wright, 26, was headed northbound on Deerfoot Trail near 17th Avenue SE around 10 a.m. when she spotted a car careen off an adjacent street and down an embankment.

She quickly called her boyfriend, Matthew Robson, 27, who was travelling in his own car close behind.

Both pulled over. Wright quickly dialed 911 while Robson, who served as a volunteer firefighter in Okotoks for more than two years, sprang into action.

Robson leapt over a fence and swam across a freezing irrigation canal to reach the vehicle's lone occupant.

"I saw the guy stumbling around and then he fell over next to the vehicle, which was on fire," Robson recalled. "I carried him about 60 feet away from the car ... less than a minute later the gas tank went."

Wright, watching the shocking events unfold from the roadside, said she was confident in her boyfriend's abilities.

"Matt is kind of (an) action-hero-type guy," she said last night. "It was like something out of a movie. I am just glad we were able to help him."

Officials praised the efforts of both individuals yesterday, but Robson was modest when asked about his actions.

"It's just my character," he said, noting his training in Okotoks played a major role in keeping the motorist stable.

"If it wasn't for my girlfriend who saw it and conducted everything, it's very possible things would have ended up differently."

Daring rescue

- Work. Matthew Robson and Natalie Wright both went to work after rescuing the motorist.
- Sewage. When reached in the evening, Robson joked that he was on his way home to wash the stench of sewage off.
- Hospital. The motorist, who has yet to be identified, was rushed to hospital with life-threatening injuries, but his condition was later upgraded.
- Driver. Investigators were still trying yesterday evening to determine what caused the driver to lose control.

Explore the city as a tourist, without spending like one

Living in Calgary can be on the pricey side, but it doesn't have to cost you much — or anything for that matter — to have a good time with your spouse.

Hala Dehais, manager of public relations for Tourism Calgary, said the downtown core has plenty of cheap attractions year-round, such as skating in the winter, fishing in the summer and brochure-guided tours of the city's most storied areas.

"I think we definitely need to raise the profile for some of these activities," Dehais said, pointing to Tourism Calgary's Capture Wow contest as one initiative intent on doing so.

The contest, held earlier this year, challenged residents to submit photos of their "biggest" tourism moments in the city.

Calgary also boasts 700 kilometres of pathways and nearly 300 more kilometres of on-street bike-ways.

My girlfriend and I hit some of these pathways over the weekend and enjoyed ourselves despite the soggy weather.

You can read more about our experience online, on my Minimum Living blog at metronews.ca/calgary.

► Cavalia performer Fairland Ferguson talks with Hannah Smith, 9, about how to take care of her new horse Nevada. Hannah was given the horse through the efforts of the Children's Wish Foundation.

Young girl granted big wish at Cavalia

- Children's Wish Foundation grants 1,500th wish in Alberta/N.W.T. chapter
- Cavalia, created by Cirque du Soleil co-founder, runs through July 3

KATIE TURNER
@METRONEWS.CA

Hannah Smith knew she was going to see horses perform at Cavalia yesterday, but she didn't know she would be leaving with a horse of her own.

After undergoing an operation last spring for a brain tumour, Hannah, 9, had her name entered for the Children's Wish Foundation and it was all about horses.

"We kind of felt it was an important milestone to celebrate and we wanted to do something special for Hannah," said Chantal Macleod of the Children's Wish Foundation.

Hannah's mom, Tina Houseman, said Hannah has been dreaming of having a horse of her own since she was two.

"It's actually a dream come true. It's really amazing."

Following a matinee of Cavalia at Canada Olympic Park, Hannah was led to the paddock where she was told Nevada, a horse she'd met last week, was hers to take home to her acreage near Cardston, Alta.

"It was great. I had tears in my eyes," said Rod Wick, one of the people responsible for finding a horse.

As for Hannah, she only had one word to describe her feelings about the day: "Happy."

Wish come true

- The Children's Wish Foundation has granted 17,000 wishes throughout Canada.
- About 125 wishes are granted annually in the Alberta/Northwest Territories chapter.
- A child can be nominated for a wish at childrenswish.ca

KEEP ON TREKKING 'I PLAN TO PLAY RIKER AS LONG AS I'M ALIVE'

Jonathan Frakes, who played the popular character Cmdr. William T. Riker in Star Trek: The Next Generation, was at Comic Con this weekend in Calgary.

Why come to Calgary Comic Con?

I get the advantage of going to a place I've only ever been once. Work with (William) Shatner, whom I adore. I haven't been here since I was on the show, and the fans here are very passionate fans. My friend Brent Spiner, the guy who played Data, said it was a great con.

How important is it for you to connect with the fans?

My position is if someone's not going to enjoy being here, they shouldn't show up. I've seen people come to these and not realize that they were lucky to have these fans and we have a responsibility to thank them.

You've acted in Star Trek. Are you a fan of it as well?

It changed my life. How could I not be? It's a double-edged sword working in Star Trek, though. There's not many acting jobs unless you're Patrick Stewart, but I was lucky enough to find another craft in directing.

The new movie rebooted the old cast. Could someone else play Riker if they rebooted your cast?
Gosh. I suppose I could be made younger, but I plan to play Riker as long as I'm alive.

City inching forward on secondary suites

- ▶ In March, council voted in favour of community consultation
- ▶ Options include having one open house per quadrant or two per ward

KATIE TURNER
@METRONEWS.CA

Nearly 600,000 Calgarians in 95 communities could be asked to take part in the city's public-consultation process to deal with secondary suites.

The neighbourhoods to be consulted are those that lie within 2.5 kilometres of a post-secondary institute, as well as those within 400 metres of an LRT or Bus Rapid Transit stop.

A secondary suite is typically a basement flat in a home that is rented out relatively cheaply, often to students. However, getting the proper permits and meeting necessary regulations is a labyrinthine process, and many have called for changes to the zoning laws.

Three options for public consultation on secondary suites will be presented to council today, each one reflecting a different cost and level of public engagement.

Ald. Dale Hodges said that spending more than $1 million on a study is no guarantee a significant number of people will participate.

However, Ald. Brian Pincoff said consultation is necessary to get a true sense of what Calgarians ▶ Leor Rotchild bought a home in the northeast with an illegal secondary suite. He's hoping to bring it up to code as soon as possible and rent it out.

think of secondary suites.

"We've got to have a way of having the discussion about secondary suites and moving forward on them," he said. "If you are going to do it, do it right the first time."

Calgarian Leor Rotchild purchased a home this year with a pre-existing illegal secondary suite, which he hopes to rent out.

He said he's in favour of the public-consultation process but would like to see council make some headway on secondary suites sooner rather than later.

"There's definitely some frustration," he said. "It will take as long as it takes, but yeah, of course I'd like to see it happen as soon as possible."

$1.3M

If council votes for the third and most expensive option, the cost of consultation would range from $1,046,000 to $1,296,000. The least expensive option would cost $280,000 to $380,000.

The fires reportedly

► Michael Hornburg stands next to a modified Leopard Armoured Recovery Vehicle named Hornburg after his son Nathan Hornburg, who was killed in Afghanistan. Yesterday would have marked Nathan's 28th birthday.

Hundreds hit the pavement yesterday to show their support and gratitude to Canada's military personnel as well as pay tribute to a local fallen soldier.

In honour of Cpl. Nathan Hornburg, who was killed in Afghanistan in 2007, an Armoured Recovery Vehicle rolled into North Glenmore Park bearing the name Hornburg on the side.

"When I saw the tank, I must admit I had quite a bit of tears and emotions early this morning to see it rolling in to the park," said Nathan's father Michael Hornburg.

"I'm very proud of the people here today and of Master Cpl. Luke Jahjendic of the Lord Strathcona's Horse Regiment has served one combat tour in Bosnia and three combat tours in Afghanistan.

He said seeing the support of Calgarians is "what we've been waiting for."

"We just came back out of Afghanistan last year in November and so this is a great thing to see."

Kidnapping funded al-Qaida: CIA

- Abductions more than doubled in a year, agency says
- Bin Laden eyed hostage-taking as revenue stream

Pressured by increased scrutiny of terrorist money sources and strikes aimed at its financiers, al-Qaida's core organization in Pakistan turned to kidnapping for ransom to offset dwindling cash reserves, U.S. officials say, based on information they found in files taken from Osama bin Laden's compound.

Bin Laden's interest in kidnapping as a cash-raiser bolsters accounts that the financial squeeze had hampered al-Qaida's ability to move money. The al-Qaida founder was killed last month by U.S. Navy SEALs.

U.S. analysts are trying to learn more from the recovered files about al-Qaida's money sources. They hope to identify important al-Qaida donors, especially wealthy Persian Gulf figures who dealt with bin Laden dating to his work with Afghan fighters in the campaign against Soviet occupiers in the late 1980s.

Held for ransom

Figures from the National Counterterrorism Center show that 3,366 hostages were taken in Pakistan in 2009, compared to 1,264 in 2008.

New Afghan law to end 'bride wars'

Afghan brides could soon face limits to their lavish ceremonies under a proposed law that would restrict the number of wedding invitees.

The law is intended to cut down on the pressure faced by poor Afghans to match the elaborate weddings of the elite. The government is threatening to fine party-hall owners who allow more than 500 people at a wedding.

Under Taliban rule, lavish ceremonies were forbidden. But over the past decade, rich Afghans have begun renting out the country's biggest halls to host thousands of people.

Daring Falls rescue saves two

A Canadian police officer dangled by a rope above the raging waters of the Niagara River to pull off a dramatic rescue on Saturday.

Const. Shawn Black of the Niagara Parks Police was lowered from a helicopter to a stranded boat with two American police officers on board. He attached himself to one of the officers and they were lifted into the air and flown to Goat Island. He then repeated the process for the second officer. The rescue took place about 900 metres from Horseshoe Falls, at a point when the current picks up speed, a Niagara police spokesman said.

The Americans had become stranded while conducting their own rescue.

► A police car is covered in messages of support left by the public in Vancouver. People rioted on downtown streets after the Vancouver Canucks lost to the Boston Bruins in Game 7 of the Stanley Cup final last Wednesday.

Polo rioter says sorry

► Athlete's lawyer calls him a 'very brave young man' for publicly taking responsibility ► Police blame the riot on small band of 'anarchists and criminals' linking them to similar riot during the 2010 Winter Olympics

A rising star on Canada's junior water polo team has made an emotional public apology for his role in the Stanley Cup riots in Vancouver last Wednesday.

A sobbing Nathan Kotylak told Global Television he wasn't looking for any sympathy. But he told Global that he wanted people to know there had already been "serious consequences." Kotylak turned himself into police after social media sites posted pictures showing a youth stuffing a burning rag into the gas tank of a police car.

Water Polo Canada said it suspended a player facing allegations stemming from the post-game riot and added that it would be investigating.

Kotylak's lawyer obtained a court order allowing the 17-year-old, who would normally not be identified under the Youth Criminal Justice Act, to make his public apology.

CRTC to address digital content

► Independent operators voice concerns at hearing about anti-competitive behaviour in mobile market

With more and more TV content in Canada being delivered online through mobile devices such as smartphones and tablets, Canadian regulators open hearings this week on possible measures to ensure a level playing field for service providers.

New wireless company Public Mobile says it wants to ensure an equal opportunity for all players even if it doesn't currently offer such services for its mobile phone customers.

"We're interested in potentially expanding our set of services and making sure that if we moved into things that were closer to broadcast distribution, we

"You'd get different content depending on which cellphone you subscribe to ... to us that makes no sense."

KEN ENGLEHART,
SENIOR VICE-PRESIDENT, ROGERS

would have the flexibility to compete in those markets," said Public Mobile executive Bruce Kirby.

Public Mobile will appear before the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission in Gatineau, Que., today to make its case for fairness in a field dominated by major players such as Shaw Communications Inc. and BCE, which own most of the country's television broadcasting assets.

In recent years, much of Canada's private broadcasting sector has been swallowed up by a handful of big companies. Shaw, for example, has bought 11 local Global TV stations across Canada and a group of specialty stations such as HGTV and Showcase.

After approving the Shaw sale last fall, the CRTC said it was worried that consolidation could produce anti-competitive behaviour and announced it would hold the hearings.

United recovering from computer outage

A five-hour computer outage that virtually shut down United Airlines Friday night and early Saturday is a stark reminder of how dependent airlines have become on technology.

Passengers saw their flight information vanish from airport screens, and thousands were stranded as United cancelled 31 flights and delayed 105 worldwide.

The airline still had no explanation for the outage Saturday afternoon. But things could have been much worse.

Friday's shutdown occurred late enough in the day that many of the cancelled flights were the last planes out for the day, said

Henry Harteveltdt, an airline analyst with Forrester Research. On a Monday morning, the results could have been catastrophic.

"It happened as a lot of the airline was going to sleep for the night," Harteveltdt said.

That doesn't mean affected travellers were happy.

"I'm just amazed at how catastrophic the failure was," said Jason Huggins, 35, who was trying to fly home to Chicago after a week working at his software company's San Francisco headquarters. "All the computer screens were blank, just showing the United logo."

On a typical day, United cancels 15 to 30 flights for reasons ranging from fog to maintenance problems or staffing shortages. But passengers said a computer glitch should not have grounded the airline.

"They're infrequent, but the fact that they happen at all is puzzling. These are mission-critical," said airline analyst Robert Mann.

CALGARY'S CLOSING-TIME CONUNDRUM

HIGH PLAINS DRIFTER

JAMES CALLSEN
METRO CALGARY

I took in the grand opening of a brand new drinking establishment last week. It was a great time. However, just as things were starting to get really good, I had to go.

It wasn't an emergency, and I wasn't asked to leave, but my truck was parked outside and I had to work in the morning. Seeing as how I don't live in one of the finite areas covered by Calgary's post-6 p.m. transit and well into a $40 cab ride, it was my only way to get home, get a decent sleep and get to work on time in the morning.

In other words, yet another fun night on the town was cut short due to a lack of post-pub travel options.

I am aware that making my home in the deep south-east involves giving up

"... the C-Train shuts down well within the confines of party time. Taking the bus home from the bar is about as efficient as crawling. Cabs are always hard to come by at close and, hopefully, everyone knows when to draw the line when it comes to getting behind the wheel."

some of the perks of living close to downtown. But for a city that is so great to drink in, it's not a great place to get home.

Outside of the Stampede, the C-Train shuts down well within the confines of party time. Taking the bus home from the bar is about as efficient as crawling. Cabs are always hard to come by at close and, hopefully, everyone knows when to draw the line when it comes to getting behind the wheel.

In addition to all the wonderful things improved transit would provide, it would keep drunks off the roads, prevent goons from fighting while waiting for taxis and save thousands of women sore feet from walking home in heels.

If we truly are a world-class city, we need to have first-class transit. Be it more cab licences, C-Train routes stretching into the deep areas of suburban Calgary (where a lot of us would give anything to leave the SUV at home) or even places where it would be easier (not to mention safer) to park your ride overnight in the downtown. If we're the great party town we purport ourselves to be, these things need to be a higher priority.

I'm not saying it's up to city council to make sure we all have a safe ride home, but in addition to all the other benefits, better transit could do wonders for our already great party reputation.

Hopefully, 20 years from now we can hoist a pint and muse upon the time when you had to shut it down early or spend the equivalent of your bar tab just to get home safely.

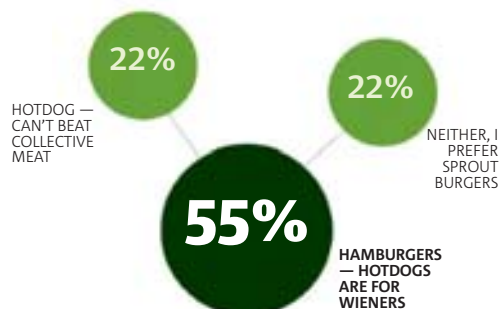

I'd drink to that.

Worth mentioning

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates.

A Saudi woman defiantly drove through the nation's capital while others brazenly cruised by police patrols in the first forays of a campaign that hopes to ignite a road rebellion against the male-only driving rules in the ultraconservative kingdom.

It was a rare grassroots challenge to the Western-backed Saudi monarchy as it tries to ride out the Arab world's wave of change, and a lesson in how the uprisings are taking root in different ways. In this case, the driver's seat was turned into a powerful platform for women's rights Friday in a country where women have almost no political voice.

"We've seen that change is possible," said Maha al-Qahtani. She said she drove for 45 minutes around the capital, Riyadh, with her husband in the passenger seat. "This is Saudi women saying, 'This is our time to make a change.'"

About 40 women took part in Friday's show of defiance. No arrests or violence were reported, though al-Qahtani was later ticketed for driving without a licence.

Freeloaders not allowed in space

The billionaire businessman behind Virgin Galactic says William Shatner, and other celebrities, shouldn't expect any free rides into space.

The space tourism enterprise is already taking reservations for flights, which could begin next year.

But it's become clear that the actor who played Captain James T. Kirk, perhaps the world's most famous fictional spaceman, is not among the 440 people from 40 countries planning to go up.

"William Shatner has said that he's scared to go into space and it's quite ironic really when you think of his career," company founder Sir Richard Branson told The Canadian Press. "And, like most celebrities, he would like a freebie."

The cost of a seat is $200,000 US.

The 80-year-old actor recently admitted he did not want to boldly go anywhere beyond the Earth's atmosphere.

Branson suggested the Star Trek actor is in the minority. "Most people are unlike William Shatner. I would say nine out of 10 people — if they could afford it — would love to go into space." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lady Gaga won two awards and provided a double shot of her trademark edgy, eccentric stage theatrics at last night's MuchMusic Video Awards — but it was a surprise appearance from beloved teen-pop star Justin Bieber that really sent fans into a frenzy.

"I want to say thank you so much to all my fans, you guys are amazing," Bieber said as he accepted his first award of the evening, international video by a Canadian, which he shared with Toronto rapper Drake.

"I love you, Toronto."

And Toronto loved him right back — but it was his relationship with Selena Gomez that dominated this night.

The teens' budding partnership has been the subject of much tabloid fascination, and the couple didn't mind encouraging the chatter with a series of coy on-camera appearances.

It began during Bieber's red-carpet entrance, when he was asked which performers he was excited to see.

"I am most excited to see Selena perform tonight — I like her song, it's a great song," said Bieber, clad in a pink blazer, white graphic T-shirt and jeans, with a pink scarf hanging from his back pocket.

Gomez, too, made some not-so-subtle references to her relationship to the teen titan.

"You guys may not know this, but I love everything about Canada," she winked in her opening monologue, looking grown up in a white top, abbreviated black shorts and red high heels.

"Hockey, I play. Back bacon? I just ate some back-stage. And it's just fun to say 'Saskatchewan.'"

"Basically, I love Canada."

Moments later, she presented Bieber with his first award.

"Selena? Nice to meet you, I'm Justin," he said with a grinning Drake standing next to him.

"You're very beautiful. Maybe we could go out sometime?"

All that PG-rated sweetness stood in stark contrast to the boundaries-testing raunch conjured by Gaga, the al-

Back then, Gaga took the stage for a medley of her hits with a gaggle of barely dressed dancers and a large model of a New York subway car.

After much carefully choreographed weirdness, she closed that evening by posing with a metal bustier shooting sparks into the night air.

While Reese Witherspoon's advice to young starlets at the MTV Movie Awards about avoiding reality shows and sex tapes may have been meant as a joke, but Girls Gone Wild impresario Joe Francis thinks the Oscar-winning actress was "showing her age by making those comments," according to Popeater.

"I just think that Reese needs to rethink what she said," Joe says. "Once you have a sex tape, you become a sex symbol ... Look at Marilyn Monroe. Had she never done that Playboy cover, we wouldn't be talking about her right now." ● METRO

The divorce syndrome

► Earlier this month, researcher Hyun Sik Kim of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, released an eye-opening study ► Children of divorced parents often fall behind their classmates in math and social skills ► We talk to Kim about the possible long-term impact

SAM CASTONE
LIFE@METRONews.ca

METRO WORLD NEWS

You studied children during the first two years after the divorce. Why is that period so crucial?

I studied that period mainly due to data availability — information was available only up to spring of fifth grade, although now, information up to eighth grade is available, which enables me to extend my analyses. But one of the main controversies around divorce is whether children of divorce catch up with children from intact families some time after divorce. That's why it was very important to examine development of children of divorce after divorce occurs.

What surprised you the most?

That I failed to find negative impacts of divorce in the pre-divorce stage. People tend to think that couples go through intense marital conflict before they decide to divorce — otherwise why choose to divorce? And it's widely accepted that children under parents' marital discord experience developmental setbacks, such as retardation in cognitive skills and high frequency of problem behaviours. However, my study finds that there is no differential growth in the pre-divorce stage.

Yet you found their social skills were stunted?

I found that children of divorce lagged behind children from intact families in the growth of interpersonal social skills in the during-divorce stage. Why, I can only speculate. One possibility is that children of divorce go through emotional problems, which is consistent with my finding that children of divorce experienced problems in internalizing their problem behaviours. Another reason may be related to stigma attached to parental divorce, so that children of divorce would not want others to know their own situations, which may lead to less frequent interactions with others. It should also be added that these behaviours were reported by teachers.

Do you have any good news for children of divorce?

I found that development of children of divorce did not worsen in the post-divorce stage even though they did not catch up with children from intact families. In other words, children of divorce developed as similarly as children from intact families in the post-divorce stage.

Divorce is so common these days. Do you think, eventually, anti-social behaviour and

Rising trends

The American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers often polls its members about what they've seen or done lately. Here's what they said.

- 81% Of those polled said they use social media evidence (like Facebook posts) to help win a divorce case for clients.
- 48% Have seen a spike in couples going to court, rather than settling civilly.
- 40% saw a downturn in their business three years back, when the recession hit and folks put divorces on hold.

low math scores will be the norm for most kids? In other words, will we have to redefine what we expect from children?

This is really a hard question to answer from my study. One very important finding in my study is that children from intact families suffer more compared to children of divorce if the former children were in families plagued by marital conflicts. In this case, we can predict positive effects of divorce for those children. But remember, I just examined children two years after divorce. I cannot at all predict how children of divorce develop until they become adults.

► This recipe makes enough fondue to serve six.

Preparation:

1 Rub inside of fondue pot with garlic clove. Pour in wine and bring to a boil; reduce to low heat. Add Emmenthal and Gruyere cheeses. Stir gently in a figure-eight pattern to avoid lumps. Add drops of lemon juice if cheese does not blend in easily.

2 Mix together cornstarch and kirsch until smooth; stir into cheese mixture. Season with pepper and nutmeg while stirring until smooth.

3 Place fondue pot over tabletop burner and serve with bread.

4 Using fondue forks, dip bread cubes in fondue. Stir occasionally to keep fondue smooth. When fondue pot is nearly empty, layer of lightly browned cheese will form on bottom. Scrape with wooden spatula for real connoisseurs.

► Canadian company helping save African lives with a CO2 cuts program ► Find out what you can do to help

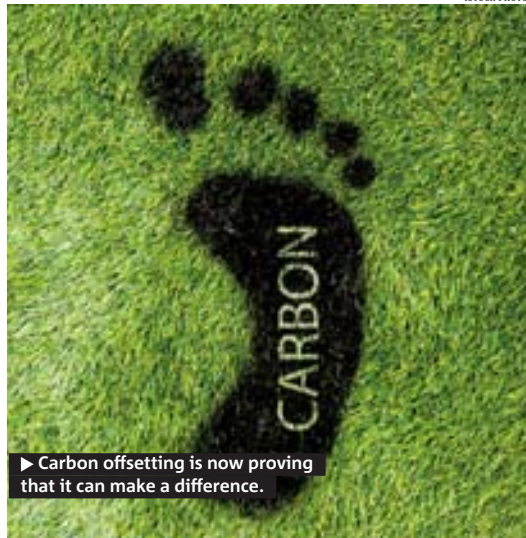

BEN KNIGHT
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

Carbon offsets — money paid by eco-conscious companies for carbon emissions they have not been able to reduce — are now being used to save lives in the developing world.

Offsetters, a Vancouver-based provider of carbon-management solutions, has become the first Canadian company involved in offering a high-quality cookstove program in Africa.

"The big appeal of these projects is that the carbon benefits are very clear," says James Tansey, CEO of Offsetters. "The side benefits of doing this are, in some ways, even more important."

The new stoves are bound for Uganda, where most cooking is done indoors, burning wood, garbage or whatever waste materials are available. This is such a dirty method, installing the new stoves will be like removing 4,000 cars from the world's roads. The potential health benefits are startling.

Carbon data

Who's buying carbon offsets? World-wide data for 2010:

"Indoor air quality is one of the largest causes of child mortality — more significant than malaria," Tansey notes. "So this project leads not only to reductions, but also very significant improvements in health and well-being."

This is green policy at its best. A world-wide effort to reduce CO2 emissions in the air — through the purchase of carbon offsets — leads directly to safer, longer lives in Africa.

"For these kinds of projects, companies that are reducing their emissions within their operations put a price on carbon," explains Tansey.

"They're paying maybe $20 a ton for the carbon emissions they can't reduce. That money is then pooled, and used to subsidize the cost of the cookstoves."

Offsets come in two kinds: a voluntary market, and one demanded by eco-friendly legislation.

"The global market is around $113-million in voluntary transactions. The regulated market, which is also something we work in — particularly in Europe — is hundreds of millions of dollars in transactions."

They call her Dynamo Betty.

At the age of 79, Betty Ford is one of the top sales

Ford has worked since she was 13 years old in numerous office and sales jobs.

She taught Dale Carnegie courses and sold high-end condos. She was 69 when a former sales manager gave her a call.

"Ford, you're dying on the vine," Betty recalls him saying. "I want you come and sell RV's with me." Now after 10 successful years at her job Betty is facing another turning point in life. She promised ArrKann she'd stay with them until she turned 80. With her birthday in August fast approaching she is now planning on moving to Courtney, B.C. to be closer to her family. Does that mean she'll quit work?

"I already have four job

there and I'm going to find it."

Go get 'em, Dynamo Betty.

Meet the man with the iron wardrobe

An ordinary office day may be boring, but it might cheer you up when you find out that your colleague is a superhero. A telecoms company employee, Wang Kang stunned his office colleagues and boss in Shanghai, China, when he strutted into the office in his homemade Iron Man suit on June 3.

Wang, age 25, told Metro that his Iron Man MK 1 suit is made of high-density foam, wires and tubes and then painted the colour of aged iron. It took three months and 3,000 yuan ($465) to finish this 50 kg armor costume.

What inspired you to make this Iron Man suit? I have been a crazy fan since the first Iron Man film was released in 2008, and I like doing handmade stuff. I thought it would be so cool if I could make Iron Man armor so simply. Maybe I just wanted to be cool at the beginning. But it's much cooler than I thought after I finished it.

How did you feel when you walked into the office like that? I felt so cool and excited when I walked into the office with this Iron Man suit on, and some of my colleagues didn't recognize me and even got scared of me. It was great fun that people saw me as if I was a real superhero. Then I was so happy that everyone praised my effort, even my boss complimented me.

Has this Iron Man suit changed your life? I never thought I could be famous because of it, now I have become very busy replying to all kinds of emails and messages from my own fans, which I enjoy. In fact many women want to know me and be my girlfriend, because they think I am a creative and interesting guy. ● METRO

Major domination by McIlroy

► Irishman erases Masters collapse, wins U.S. Open in record fashion

Every time Rory McIlroy lined up a shot yesterday, there was some sort of record on the line, some kind of history to be made.

That was this year's U.S. Open version of suspense. There was never any doubt that the kid from Northern Ireland was going to win it.

In complete control of his emotions and his game, McIlroy never slipped. He won his first major championship by shooting a 2-under 69 at Congressional and closed his four-day onslaught at 16-under 268, eight shots ahead of Jason Day and four shots better than the U.S. Open scoring record formerly held by four players, including two named Woods and Nicklaus.

After the final tap-in, Gerry McIlroy met his son as he walked off the green.

"Happy Father's Day," the new champion said.

Happy Father's Day, indeed.

All week, McIlroy's performance was compared to Tiger Woods' 15-shot blowout at Pebble Beach in 2000.

"I was trying to go out there today and emulate him in some way," McIlroy said. "I played great for four days and I couldn't be happier."

The win comes two months after a collapse so thorough, some wondered if McIlroy could recover. He took a four-shot lead into the final day of the Masters, but after hitting his 10th

"I think this kid's going to have a great career. I don't think there's any question about it. He's got all the components."

GOLF LEGEND JACK NICKLAUS

tee shot near a cabin on the grounds of Augusta National, he melted down, shot 80 and finished 15th.

His shot on the 10th hole yesterday wasn't comparable. On the 214-yard par-3, a downhill shot over water, McIlroy knocked the ball above the hole, then watched as it stopped for a split second and started spinning backward before stopping an inch or two from the hole.

He tapped in for a birdie that got him to 17-under par at a tournament that had never seen a score lower than 12 under before Friday.

"That was the point in the round that I really felt it was mine to lose," McIlroy said.

McIlroy now owns the scoring records for 36, 54 and 72 holes at the toughest test in golf and he became only the third player to break 70 in all four rounds of the U.S. Open.

Canada's Findlay wins yet another triathlon

Edmonton's Paula Findlay edged Helen Jenkins by four seconds to win the triathlon world series event in Kitzbuehel, Austria, yesterday and extend her lead at the top of the overall standings.

Findlay finished in 2:05:52.

"I'm thrilled again. Wow, that was a real hard race. I was running maximum the whole way," she said.

Findlay had emerged from the swim more than a minute down on the leaders, Jenkins and Sarah Haskins. She caught Jenkins at the end of the fourth bike leg.

Findlay leads the world series with 2,400 points. The win is her fifth in six races over the last 11 months. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Sometimes you just have to follow your instincts, so trust them — and act.

What happens today will be removed from your usual experience. It may be difficult to make sense of.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Something will happen today that will encourage you to become a more tolerant human being.
